

Interesting facts about birds (Peacock facts)

1. Did you find the habitat of peafowl?

All these species of peafowl are scattered into different geographical areas of the world. When talking about Indian peafowl, its native land is Asian countries, which include India and Sri Lanka. When talking about green peafowl, it is native to southeast Asian countries, which include Thailand, Indonesia, Myanmar and India. When speaking about Congo peafowl, it's exclusively native to the Democratic Republic of Congo.

2. How can one identify species of peafowl?

Males of the blue and green peafowl species have differently colored feathers, which allows for differentiation. Blue peacocks have a metallic blue-green plumage, while green peacock have blue-bronze plumage. In contrast, females of both species have muted brown or gray plumage.

3. Do you know the difference between a peacock and a peahen?

The main distinguishing feature between a peacock and a peahen is the multicolored tail; peacocks are male with long, colorful tails (trains), while peahens are females, who lack them.

References

- peacock – Scholars | Britannica Kids | Encyclopedia
- <https://www.britannica.com/animal/peacock>
- <https://www.treehugger.com/peacock-facts-5094142>
- <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Peafowl>
- <https://www.sciencekids.co.nz/sciencefacts/animals/peacock.html>
- <https://animals.howstuffworks.com/birds/peacock-feathers.htm>